

Nine (9) proofs that the current GOP is LIBERAL: (alternative title: "Drop the L-word")

When suggesting to one U.S. Representative, a democrat, how to argue against the House Republicans, on one particular issue, here is what I had to say:

"APOLOGY to ALL!! - I forgot a key thing** everyone remembers that I (and a few others) had suggested to Rep. Bass to seek bankruptcy protections for college student loans -- (I apologize to everybody for my party, the Republicans, for blocking these measures. LOL) -- OK, I felt guilty for forgetting to suggest a "way around" the GOP members of the House of Representatives:

Karen, if you suggest a bill to return Bankruptcy (and ALL other Standard Consumer Protections) to both private and Federal college loans, they will balk, and here is how you can address that: EMBARRASS THEM:

1) Tell the Republicans that they are NOT true conservatives, because they are hypocrites who don't love their neighbor as themselves: THEY (these congressmen) want to keep BANKRUPTCY for their *own* selves -- AND their rich contributors (bankers, higher ed people, like rich University Presidents, etc.), but not the college student. LIBERAL: Morally evil.

2) Bankruptcy protections are a "Free Market" check and balance on "excess" Easy Loans, which is needed to at least mitigate the Higher ed bubble that is present. (Think: 2010 Housing Bubble.) LIBERAL: in opposition to 'free market' checks.

3) Excess easy loans are "Big Government" over-reach, using Federal Dollars (costing taxpayer$ Dollar$) -- Epic Fail: LIBERAL: Big Government action.

4) Excess federal loans not only cost taxpayers (see #3, above), they also "bid up" tuition, since colleges/universities RAISE TUITION "to match" increased borrowing ability. (US Congress keeps raising the 'Student Loan' debt limit.) -- LIBERAL: Distortion of the Free Market.

5) Non-uniform Bankruptcy Law is NOT permitted by the U.S. Constitution -- only "uniform BK" Law: "The Congress shall have Power...To establish...uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States." U.S. Constitution, in Art. 1, §8, Clause 1. -- Epic Fail: LIBERAL: Unconstitutional.

6) Tuition is legally a tax on students since it is funding flowing to an arm of the government - and soaring tuition, due to bone-headed Republicans' refusal to apply Free Market principles above, is EXCESS TAXING & SPENDING = LIBERAL.

7) Citizen tax dollar$ make or back these loans -- a tax on the citizen too: EXCESS TAXING & SPENDING = LIBERAL.

8) Republicans typically vote on the huge appropriations bills, which *dwarf* all other spending, and since we keep going deeper in National Debt, they are LIBERAL!

9) ** UNCONSTITUTIONAL: DUE PROCESS ** Lack of "Truth in Lending" protection on College Loans means the student is NOT even told his/her loans lack all the Standard Consumer Protections (the bankruptcy safety-net, Statutes of Limitations, Rights to Refinance, Fair Debt & Collection Practices, adherence to usury laws, and of course, the Truth in Lending protections, themselves). THIS IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL since the courts have held a Prohibition Against Vague Laws as standard of American case law that states that a given statute is "Void for Vagueness" (VFV), and thus unenforceable if it is too vague for the average citizen to understand its meaning or application.

Karen, thank you for being attentive to *our* collective concerns here -- I don't hate the evil Congressmen/Congresswomen who are for debt slavery here (for God says to love our enemies), BUT:

In no uncertain terms, I state that I feel SURE Jesus convicted my conscience to share with you this one additional request:

Please EMBARRASS the DAYLIGHTS out of these bad House Republicans, by REPEATEDLY calling them "LIBERAL" -- I'm a Republican, and i know "certain things" -- such as that these GOP R.I.N.O.'s hate this -- if you politely ask them first, they may "sign on" to your bill -- do be polite first, but if they rebel against God, use the Nuclear Option -- "Drop the 'L'-word -- call them LIBERAL til the cows come home."
