Hi Gordon,

Here's a link to a paper I wrote on this subject at a symposium a number of years ago.

You're welcome.

And, thank you for your help in the past, Trish, Michael, and Eva, especially regarding tips for Bible Accuracy books, which included those from Lee Stroble, Dr. Erwin Lutzer, and Josh McDowell.

Although I'm very poor, I was still able to purchase a very few for myself and hopefully 1 or 2 friends.

However, I write because I'm confused about Isaiah 66:7-8 and Ezekiel 37:21-22.

I had previously written an article on this subject, claiming that these passages were fulfilled when Israel was "reborn" and, on May 14, 1948, returned to its land. However, one friend insists that the Isaiah prophecy refers to Israel's return from Babylon in 538Bc--536Bc or so (and he didn't tell me what his church elders, at probably a cult religion, say about the Ezekiel passage, because he promised to look into only "one" Bible verse, Lol!).

So, my question is simple: What is referred to in these passages? My initial guess would include "dual fulfillment" to include both the May 14 date (when Great Britain withdrew her mandate, and caused Israel to be declared a sovereign state) as well as their return from Babylon in 538Bc--536Bc or so.

Dr. David Jeremiah's book, which you are sending me, might have an answer, but I don't expect it anytime soon.

Thanks if you can offer insight.
