STUDENT LOAN JUSTICE ✓
@StudentLoanJus1

...

We were working hard to enlighten Charlie Kirk.
Here is one of our exchanges with him from a year or two ago.
He had taken a terrible turn over the past months, having done a deal to sell a student loan company, and we were hitting him very hard for it.
I am sorry for his death, and disappointed that he will never be able to come around an acknowledge the correctness of our argument.

Great. Do it. I'm all for it.
But how does that affect the 38 million people in the country RIGHT NOW, who were never going to be able to repay their federal student loans even before the pandemic?
It doesn't. Not one bit. And these people vote. And these people are more republicans/independents than democrats.

Republicans have been tricked to the wrong side of this issue, and now they are losing the close elections. Georgia is the worst state in the country btw:

Student loan debt in Nebraska (of all places) will be exceeding the states annual budget in a few years.
You fight fiercely against student loan cancellation, and therefore FOR the perpetuation of the lending system...and for the colleges getting rich from this unconstitutional loan scam.
There is nothing conservative, much less libertarian about that.
If you were to publicly champion the return of constitutional bankruptcy protections to the debt, as Matt Gaetz and Josh Hawley are, I might change my tune about you. But until then, you are just another sycophant for the student loan swamp.

This is what you fight for, Charlie, whether wittingly, or unwittingly.

I would hope unwittingly.
